Animal care staff will continue to work on staggered schedules and wear the appropriate personal protective equipment (PPE) during their shifts to keep our animals safe. Additionally, all of our zoologists, managers, nutritionists and veterinarian staff will continue using PPE anytime they are working with our animals, their food, or anything else the animals may come in contact with.

Will it be possible to follow social distancing protocols inside the Zoo?

Yes, absolutely. We've made some changes inside the park to allow all Zoo staff, volunteers, and guests to appropriately social distance. You will see markers in queuing areas as well as signage throughout the Zoo to remind you to follow these guidelines. Additionally, we have indicated a recommended path, with a few select one-way-only areas, to help control traffic flow.

Is it safe to visit the Zoo?

The changes we have put in place are meant to create the safest possible environment for everyone at the Zoo, including our visitors, staff, volunteers, and the animals in our care. We ask that everyone follow social distancing protocols and other posted guidelines throughout the Zoo, as well as respiratory etiquette and hand hygiene. If you feel sick before your scheduled reservation, we ask that you not visit the Zoo. If you begin feeling sick while at the Zoo, reach out to our staff so that someone from the on-site medical team may assess and assist you.
